Housed within Kennesaw State University's School of Conflict Management, Peacebuilding and Development, the Ph.D. in International Conflict Management (INCM) draws students from around the world, creating a dynamic, yet intimate, educational environment. Guided by our exceptional faculty, each doctoral student has flexibility to focus their studies according to their own career goals.

The INCM program is one of only a few doctoral programs in conflict management available in North America. Ph.D. students accepted into the program receive broad interdisciplinary training as well as opportunities to go in depth into areas of individual interest.

THE BEST OF BOTH WORLDS

Our graduates can be found succeeding in a range of careers including academia, as monitoring and evaluation specialists, working in international organizations around the globe, non-governmental organizations, government operations, and private sector analysts.
